A GREAT CHURCH GATHERING.

Program Prepared for the Pan-Anglican Conference.

LONDON, June 5.—So far as at present arranged, the following is the program for the Pan-Anglican conference to be held at Lambeth during the present summer. The proceedings are to open June 24 with the annual meeting of the church house, at which the Archbishop of Canterbury will preside. The following ecclesiastical dignitaries will attend this meeting and deliver addresses: The archbishop of Armagh, primate of all Ireland; the Bishop of Brechin, primus of the Episcopal church of Scotland, and the Archbishop of Auckland, metropolitan of New Zealand.

June 30, the first day of the conference, the bishops in attendance will hold a devotional service at Lambeth. July 1 service will be held at Westminster Abbey, and on the following day a visit will be paid to the Isle of Thanet, where St. Augustine landed on his mission to evangelize the Britons. Canterbury Cathedral and St. Augustine's College will be visited July 3. For July 4, Sunday, no special services have been yet arranged, and July 5 the conference opens its sessions at the church house, where during the ensuing fortnight the various committees will hold their meetings. The conference will devote its last week to the consideration of the reports made by the committees. The work of the conference will close August 12, with a great public service at St. Paul's cathedral.

Shoe Workers Agree upon a Five Per Cent Reduction.

MARLBORO, Mass., June 5.—The S. H. Howe Shoe Company and the Boot and Shoe Workers' International Union have reached an agreement upon nearly every article in the price list, and it has been signed by both parties. The prices agreed upon are practically a reduction of five per cent from the previous list. Eleven articles upon which the terms could not be arranged will be submitted to the state board of arbitration. The factories now run by the Howe company will be started up at once and a prosperous season is anticipated.

SHERIFF M'LAIN AT DAYTON.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, June 5.—A Times-Star special from Dayton, Ohio, says: Sheriff McLain of Urbana arrived in Dayton at 8 o'clock last evening, and was quietly conveyed to the home of his brother-in-law, A. J. Weaver, on Linden avenue. A great effort was made to keep the presence of the sheriff in this city a secret, and even after it became known that he was here it was with the greatest difficulty that he was located. The purpose of the secrecy, as subsequently explained, was to avoid interviews. The sheriff is completely worn out, having had no sleep for forty-eight hours. Early this morning he was seen at his bedside. In explanation of his departure from Urbana he said that he left at the solicitation of his friends, and that while he had no personal fears, he deferred to their wishes in the matter. Beyond this statement the sheriff begged to be excused from talking. Sheriff McLain left Urbana in company with Captain Leonard, the two separating at Springfield.

THREATENS TO DISBAND.

Democratic State Central Committee Indignant at Failure to File Nominations.

[Special despatch to the News.]

PROVIDENCE, June 5.—The Democratic state central committee will hold a meeting in this city next Wednesday, which it is expected will be of an interesting character. At the last state election no Democratic nominations were made in the towns of Bristol, East Providence, Exeter, Jamestown, Little Compton, Middletown, North Providence, Portsmouth, Smithfield and West Greenwich. After the election the state central committee appointed a sub-committee to ascertain the reason for this neglect. That committee has written to the committee in each town, and has not received a single answer. The committee is very indignant, and has prepared a report to be submitted Wednesday. It is understood that it will recommend that the state central committee take immediate and decisive action regarding the delinquency, or else disband, confessing its inability to properly supervise the work of the party in the state.

MIDDLETOWN DEFENDS HER CHICKEN THIEF RECORD.

To the Editor of the Daily News:

Dear Sir: If you will allow me space, I would like to correct a few of the many insinuations made in the News last evening under the heading "Chicken Stealing No Longer Safe on the Island."

First, the article said that it used to be as safe to steal chickens as it is for the bicyclist to scorch on Thames street. If the cyclist worked under the same difficulty as the hen thieves do, cycling would soon be a thing of the past. Carry, as well as other thieves, has been at the mercy of the shotgun more than once, and has been "liable to fall" many times.

Next, the news stated that "in an ill-fated moment" Mr. H. K. Norman had his hens stolen, and immediately started the officers on the track, with the result that Carry was arrested. Mr. H. K. Norman is, as is well known, a man of means. He went to the officials, who at once took up the case, because he offered indictments which he was able to fulfill. Now a poor man goes to these same officials, and as he can ill afford more reward for one's duty than the law allows, no notice is taken of his case, as there is nothing to be made extra by it. But in the case of one so persevering as was Mr. Howard, who has lost more than any other man, probably, at one time, it was for this once acted upon, and then only by deputizing another official to do the duty.

"After a while some one plucked Mr. Howard's chickens. Mr. Howard is also a Newporter." So was Carry, until recently, and here let it be stated that he now resides in Portsmouth, not Middletown.

"This stirred a Middletown man up to breaking all the traditions of the past and saying he had lost his chickens." This man, Chester A. Brown, is very little more than a boy, and not the full-grown man that the article insinuates.

Let the writer, who seems so well posted, look back for perhaps a dozen years or so, and he will see that Middletown has made efforts, and succeeded in ridding not only Middletown, but the island, of two of the most notorious chicken thieves. One of them to this day carries the marks of the shotgun. One person I have in mind who expended more than $50 in trying to capture a thief, and who paid $15 a day for a Newport detective who was unsuccessful in his work. The credit here was due to some of the townspeople. This is not the only case, but one of several. The town is duly grateful to Mr. Norman and Mr. Howard for their very successful and fortunate action, but would it not be as well for Middletown people to receive due credit, and not be branded as a set of cowardly men, as last night's News insinuated?

Since the arrest of Herbert Peckham, several years ago, there had been but very little trouble among the poultry raisers until Carry commenced his work a year or so back.

JUBILEE ECHOES.

Everything Turning on the Celebration.

All England Preparing to Observe the Occasion.

LONDON, June 5.—It is impossible to escape the jubilee echoes. Already everything is turning upon that celebration—dress, decoration and entertainments—while there is a shrieking chorus from the press, warning everybody against all imaginable disasters which, it is claimed, are likely to ensue. It is even pointed out that the proposed bonfires are likely to set the whole country in a blaze, while other correspondents are so impressed with the importance of the jubilee that they are not satisfied with the name of England or Britain, and want England to be re-christened Wiseland, the first four letters being the initials of Wales, Ireland, Scotland and England. This is capped by another correspondent, who wants the empire to be called Enwiscotia, so as to bring in the colonies of England.

Jubilee seat-swindling is rampant. Sharpers are meeting the incoming steamers at Port Said, Brindisi and Queenstown, and are selling to unsuspicious passengers nonexisting seats to view the jubilee procession. Many Americans have been victimized in this manner at Queenstown.

Mr. Reid's Special Embassy.

Complications in regard to the special embassy of Mr. Whitelaw Reid, proprietor of the New York Tribune, are already on the horizon. The queen will receive Mr. Reid alone, following the same precedent with the other special embassies. The foreign office is prepared to provide quarters for Mr. Reid and his suite, embracing in the latter General Nelson A. Miles, U. S. A., and Rear Admiral J. N. Miller, U. S. N. Mr. Reid, however, proposes to do credit to the United States, and Mr. Ogden Mills, his brother-in-law, is already here, seeking a large house for the accommodation of the special embassy. The foreign office officials are glad to have Mr. Reid do this, but they say they cannot separate General Miles and Admiral Miller from the rest of his suite, and they must provide their own quarters.

Monetary Commission a Failure.

In spite of the cordiality with which the United States monetary commission has been received on all sides in France, it is not believed that anything practical is likely to be accomplished there. Much has been made of the utterances of M. Meline, the French premier, at last week's banquet; but he carefully pointed out that he spoke in his own name and not in behalf of the government of France. It is also known that he has declared that France would not take the initiative unless certain that Great Britain would take part in the movement. Unfortunately for their usefulness in France, at least two out of the three American commissioners do not speak a word of French, and neither does the official secretary of the commission. The awkwardness of this was shown at the banquet, when the American envoys could not respond to the toasts.

Minor Mention.

More than thirty-five thousand signatures have already been obtained for the Scottish national memorial to the queen, praying that in state documents the words "Great Britain" and "British" should always be substituted for "England" and "English." Among the signers of the memorial are the Duke of Sutherland, and many peers, many members of Parliament, and more than eight hundred provosts and other members of the municipal corporations of Scotland.

Mr. John Erskine, a merchant of Belfast, Ireland, has offered the lords of the treasury, for the queen's acceptance, a magnificent freehold overlooking Belfast Lough, as the site of a royal residence in Ireland. The latter country, it is claimed in some quarters, has always fretted over the fact that the queen does not visit that portion of her dominions, and it has been asserted that her failure to do so is the result of the refusal of Dublin, in the sixties, to grant a site in Phoenix Park for a monument to the late prince consort.

Mr. J. Gubbins, the owner of Galtee More, the Irish colt which won the Derby Wednesday, was a poor man working in America when he inherited a great fortune from his uncle, Mr. Wyse, the Irish distiller, and immediately returned to Ireland.

Theatrical Notes.

The only dramatic novelties of the week have been "The Maid of Athens," produced at the Opera Comique Thursday night, and "Settled out of Court," presented at the Globe. Neither scored. The former is a musical and farcical medley with music hall comedians, and the latter is a gloomy comedy drama.

The Sutro sisters of Baltimore, Md., appeared at a crowded concert Monday at St. James hall. They received warm praise from the press.

There seems to be a "boom" in theatrical goods "made in America" just now. "A Night Off" is still doing a good business at the Vaudeville Theatre, where it has been successfully running for a twelvemonth.

"Secret Service" packs the Adelphi Theatre nightly, and Mr. Charles Frohman has secured the Comedy Theatre for its presentation June 12, at the conclusion of its run at the Adelphi. "Secret Service" will continue at the Comedy until the end of the season, opening at the Empire Theatre, New York, September 1. In the autumn it will be produced here by an English company.

LOST HER BOWSPRIT.

Fishing Schooner Uncle Joe Struck by a Steamer.

PORTLAND, Me., June 5.—Last night at 8 o'clock the International Steamship Company's steamer St. Croix, Captain Pike, Boston to St. John, struck fishing schooner Uncle Joe, Captain Joe Brigham, off Seguon light, and snapped her bowsprit and figurehead like paper. The St. Croix was on her eastern-bound trip, and running at full speed. Had she struck the schooner six inches farther astern she would have sunk her instantly. The St. Croix stopped, and after finding that the schooner was in no immediate danger proceeded on her course. The Uncle Joe arrived off Portland head early this morning and was brought in by a tug. It will probably cost about $400 to repair her. An investigation will be held to determine who was responsible for the collision.

This Morning's News.

LOOKING TO SAGASTA.

Public Opinion Favors Him for a New Spanish Leader.

MADRID, June 4.—Senor Sagasta, the Liberal leader, after conferring with the queen regent at the palace today, said he had told Her Majesty that the Liberals were prepared to deal with all pending questions. Public opinion continues to favor a Sagasta cabinet.

Everyone is convinced that the main question at issue in the present crisis is the selection of a new governor of Cuba capable of convincing the people that Spain is in earnest in the matter of colonial reform.

The crisis is likely to be prolonged, but there is a significant change of tone visible in the Conservative papers, which are beginning to hint that the future fate of the Conservative party is not altogether dependent upon Captain General Weyler.

The impression gains ground that, rather than see the Liberals in office, the Conservatives would consent to recall Weyler, and it is believed that Marshal Martinez Campos is willing to replace him.

It is understood that Senor Sagasta informed the queen regent that if the Liberals came into office through the refusal to countenance foreign dictation, the recall of Captain General Weyler would be among the first steps taken.

The queen regent is expected to consult Marshals Blanco and Dominguez tomorrow on the military aspects of the situation in Cuba, and there is great anxiety to learn the result of the long conference between Her Majesty and Marshal Campos, who arrived in the city yesterday and went to the palace.

The queen regent conferred yesterday evening with the president of the senate, Marquis Pazo de la Merrzed, and the latter afterwards said that he had pointed out to Her Majesty that the continuance in office of Senor Canovas del Castillo, the retiring premier, would constitute the best solution of the crisis. This opinion is shared by the president of the chamber of deputies, Senor Pidal, who had a conference with the queen regent today.

Marshal Martinez Campos is not concerned in the crisis from a political standpoint, and will give his attention to other questions, especially to the Cuban question. Senor Francisco Silvela, leader of the dissident Conservatives in the chamber, is among the politicians who have been summoned to the palace.

The Heraldo understands that the proposed Paris branch of the Bank of Spain will not be established, the negotiations on that subject having fallen through.

REPUBLICANS AGREED.

Changes in Tariff Bill Believed to Assure Its Passage.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—In the news despatches sent out from Washington last Tuesday night was the apparently insignificant item that Senator McMillan of Michigan had that evening entertained his Republican colleagues at a "sing" dinner at his house. As a matter of fact, there were few more important announcements published in Wednesday's papers. On that occasion the Republican leaders of the Senate discussed the tariff bill and the prospects of its passage in the Senate, and when the party broke up, an agreement had been reached by the terms of which, in consideration of most important changes in the wool and sugar schedules and the abandonment of the increased tax on beer, the support of every straight Republican in the Senate was secured, and the last vestige of opposition within the Republican ranks removed.

It is believed that nothing now stands in the way of the speedy passage of the bill. Of course other changes may become necessary before the bill is sent back to the House, but they will doubtless be only minor changes.

Senator Allison, who in the absence of Senator Aldrich has charge of the tariff bill, expressed the opinion today that the sugar schedule would be reached in its order on Monday, and that it would be taken up then if Senator Aldrich by that time should have so far recovered as to be able to take charge of the schedule on behalf of the Republicans. If Mr. Aldrich finds it impossible to be in the chamber when the schedule is reached, the Republicans will ask that it be passed temporarily, because of his generally conceded superior information on the subject. Senator Allison says, however, that it is his desire that the schedule should be disposed of as promptly as possible.

There is a possibility that the tobacco schedule may also be passed over, in case Senator Aldrich is not able to be present when it is reached in its regular order.

NOTHING TANGIBLE PROBABLE.

Though France Looks with Favor on the Monetary Commission.

PARIS, June 4.—It is learned from an authorized French source that the letters of credence presented to President Faure by Senator Edward O. Wolcott of Colorado and his colleagues of the United States monetary commission, former Vice President Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois and General Charles Jackson Paine of Massachusetts, are as ministers plenipotentiary to France, Great Britain and Germany, with the mission in concert with the United States ambassadors to those countries, to discuss monetary questions and come to some agreement on bimetalism. President Faure carefully avoided making a statement to them, at the audience which he accorded to the commissioners at the Elysee palace on Wednesday last, which might be interpreted as a promise to take any steps in the matter. Before the commissioners left the palace he invited them to share his box at the race for the Grand Prix de Paris. No doubt, the government of France is friendly to the American mission, but nothing tangible will be done beyond expressions of sympathy and the assurance that the matter will be seriously studied.

BY THE WHOLESALE.

Postoffice Appointments in Large Numbers Expected Soon.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The rule announced shortly after the administration assumed charge, that postmasters would be allowed to serve out their full terms, unless removed for cause, has been modified, and it is expected that wholesale appointments to postoffices will be made soon. It was officially announced today that the President and the Postmaster General will consider as having expired all postoffices which are due to expire between now and July 15. It is understood that the matter was discussed, and the decision reached at today's Cabinet meeting. The reason assigned for the modifying of the announced policy of the administration is that it is the desire of the Postoffice Department to fill as many offices as possible before the expiration of the fiscal year, July 1, in order that accounts may be begun with a new quarter.

Killed by Solomon Island Cannibals.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 4.—Advices from Sydney, New South Wales, state that another tragedy has been enacted by the treacherous natives of the Solomon Islands, presumably for cannibalistic purposes. While trading in Navaro lagoon Captain Wilson of schooner Navaro went ashore in a boat with three natives to obtain copra. As the islanders appeared to be friendly the crew of the boat accepted their invitation to accompany them to their village, but Captain Wilson decided to remain with the boat.

When out of Captain Wilson's sight the islanders attacked the crew, killing one on the spot and wounding the others. One managed to reach the boat as Wilson was compelled to sheer off, and the murderous natives overtook the other wounded sailor as he was swimming out to the schooner. Wilson repelled an attack on the vessel by firing upon the invaders, who were evidently determined to kill the remainder of the crew.

Mt. Vesuvius in Eruption.

LONDON, June 4.—A special despatch from Naples says that Mount Vesuvius is in eruption. An area of two thousand yards long by five hundred yards wide is covered with lava, and it is dangerous to approach within four hundred yards of the principal crater.

GRANT AND SHERMAN.

Their Appreciation of Each Other's Abilities.

A little before 9 o'clock on the evening of September 4, while the general was having a quiet smoke in front of his tent, and discussing the campaign in Georgia, a despatch came from Sherman announcing the capture of Atlanta, which had occurred on September 2. It was immediately read aloud to the staff, and after discussing the news for a few minutes, and uttering many words of praise of Sherman, the general wrote the following reply: "I have just received your despatch announcing the capture of Atlanta. In honor of your great victory I have ordered a salute to be fired with shotted guns from every battery bearing upon the enemy. The salute will be fired within an hour, amid great rejoicing."

In the meantime the glad tidings had been telegraphed to Meade and Butler, with directions to fire the salute, and not long afterward the roar of artillery communicated the joyful news of victory throughout our army, and bore sad tidings to the ranks of the enemy. An answer was received from Sherman, in which he said: "I have received your despatch, and will communicate it to the troops in general orders. . . . I have always felt that you would take personally more pleasure in my success than in your own, and I reciprocate the feeling to the fullest extent." Grant then wrote to Sherman: "I feel that you have accomplished the most gigantic undertaking given to any general in this war with a skill and ability which will be acknowledged in history as unsurpassed, if not unequaled. It gives me as much pleasure to record this in your favor as it would in favor of any living man, myself included."

The above correspondence with Sherman recalls the letters which were interchanged between them after General Grant's success in the West. The general wrote to Sherman at that time: "What I want is to express my thanks to you and McPherson as the men to whom, above all others, I feel indebted for whatever I have had of success. How far your advice and assistance have been of help to me you know. How far your execution of whatever has been given you to do entitles you to the reward I am receiving, you cannot know as well as I. I feel all the gratitude this letter would express, giving it the most flattering construction."

Sherman wrote a no less manly letter in reply. After insisting that General Grant assigned to his subordinates too large share of merit, he went on to say: "I believe you to be as brave, patriotic and just as the great prototype, Washington; as unselfish, kind-hearted and as honest as man should be; but the chief characteristic is the simple faith in success you have always manifested, which I can liken to nothing else than the faith a Christian has in the Saviour. . . . I knew, wherever I was, that you thought of me, and if I got in a tight place you would help me out if alive." The noble sentiments expressed in this and similar correspondence were the bright spots which served to relieve the gloomy picture of desolating war.—[General Horace Porter, in June Century.

LESSENING THE WASTE OF ENERGY CAUSED BY BRAKES.

Mechanicians have long worried over the enormous waste of energy that results from arresting by means of brakes the progress of a vehicle which must again be sent on its way. In the days of horse cars it was the starting, not the maintenance, of motion, that quickly wore out the horses, and numberless inventors racked their brains for a device by means of which the moving car's momentum could be turned into stored power ready for use in making the next start. Theoretically, the cessation of a certain speed creates, or rather leaves ready for utilization, just force enough to cause a resumption of the same velocity, and on its face the task of so utilizing it does not look like one beyond the capacity of any skilled builder of machines to perform. It has never been accomplished, however, and cars are still stopped all over the world by compelling them to wear out wheels and brake-shoes—both of which are expensive, to say nothing of the cost in coal or horse flesh of making the next change of inertia to momentum. On a trolley line up in Yonkers, however, tests are in progress of a novel air brake which, though it does not solve the old problem and use for starting the energy released by stopping, does put a part of that energy to a better service than the destruction of iron. Air brakes of the ordinary sort have been tried on trolley cars before, but a serious obstacle to their successful employment has been the speedy loss of air pressure in the reservoir, due to the frequent application of the brakes. The new device is the result of an effort to maintain a constant pressure in the reservoir by means of an air pump which is geared to the axle and is set in motion when the motorman applies the brakes. Thus, every time he reduces the speed of his car by using the stored air he sets the car itself at work renewing his supply. This considerably reduces the amount of friction on the wheels required to effect the stop, and the system is said to be entirely successful so far as it goes.—[New York Times.

UTILIZING THE CATARACTS OF THE NILE.

The cataracts of the Nile, which have always been regarded as the bane of navigation on this noble river, may yet prove to be of inestimable benefit to Egypt if the latest advices from that country are correct. It is stated that a proposal is on foot to utilize the cataracts for electric light and power purposes. It is claimed that cotton mills, sugar factories, and the various forms of Western industry which have been introduced in this ancient country during the British occupation would be greatly stimulated by the carrying out of such a scheme. On the face of it the proposal is a good one, for fuel is scarce and coal has to be brought in by boa. Electrical power could probably be delivered at considerably less cost than any steam plant could furnish it, and proposed industries which fail to attract capital under existing conditions would probably secure all that was needed if the proposed works were carried out. It is stated that preliminary surveys are now in progress, and there is no reason to suppose that any serious engineering obstacles will be encountered. Compared with our own plant at Niagara Falls, the available head will be insignificant, unless it is proposed to put in a long and costly pipe line. For although the term cataracts conveys the idea of a very sudden fall in the river, as a matter of fact these stretches of the Nile are more of the nature of rapids than cataracts, as may be judged from the fact that river steamers have been hauled against and through them in recent British expeditions up the Nile.

If the proposed plan is carried out, it will work another and an important step in the recovery of this historic land from the degradation into which it had fallen under Turkish misrule. The civil engineer has done and is doing a splendid work in the ancient land of the Pharaohs, and whatever political changes may be in store, it is to be hoped that nothing will occur to prevent its present conquest by the transit and level.

FAMOUS VESSELS OF THE OLD NAVY.

The one hundredth anniversary of the launching of frigate Constitution will be celebrated at Boston October 17 next, when Secretary Long will order the vessels of the North Atlantic fleet to that port to participate in a demonstration such as has been accorded no American warship. The last voyage of "Old Ironsides," as she is familiarly known, was made about eighteen years ago, when she crossed the ocean with exhibits for the Paris Exposition. On the way back she came near being lost, and shortly after her arrival home she was laid up at the Portsmouth navy yard, where she has since remained housed over, dismantled and in ordinary. Her seams have opened, and the old craft is fast going to decay, and she would probably soon fill with water if floated from her present resting place.

Congress has appropriated $12,000 for the preservation of the vessel, and this is now being expended, under the direction of Chief Constructor Hichborn, in putting the craft in condition, so that she may be towed to Boston for the celebration. The wheel, rudder and portions of the cabin work are all that remain of the original vessel, except some knees and timbers of her framing. The Boston Historical Society is willing to undertake the preservation of the Constitution, if the government gives the necessary permission, but this will probably never be granted.

This year is also the anniversary of the construction of another famous war vessel of the navy—the Constellation—built just about the time the Constitution took the water. The Constellation, however, was the product of a Baltimore shipyard, and has seen much active service in recent years. In her day she was the fleetest sailor in either the merchant or the naval service, of her displacement, and for years held the record from Queenstown to New York. For four years she has been the receiving ship at Newport, and as her timbers are sound she will probably be fit for service for many years yet.

A suggestion to celebrate the anniversary of the Constellation has been made to Secretary Long, and it is not improbable that she may be sent to Boston next October and divide honors with "Old Ironsides." These two ships are the oldest of the American navy, and the only ones remaining that participated in the glorious victories of the early years of this century.

MR. SIDNEY WOOLLETT AS SHYLOCK.

An interesting occasion will be Mr. Sidney Woollett's appearance in Boston on the stage of the Park Theatre in the character of Shylock in Shakespeare's play of "The Merchant of Venice," beginning next Monday evening and continuing each evening during the week, with a Saturday matinee. Mr. John Malone, Mr. Thomas L. Coleman, Mr. Frederic Vroom, Robert Elliott, Ernest Wardo and other capable actors will support him. Miss Ellen Rowland will be Portia, and Miss Olive Oliver and Miss Una Abell respectively Nerrissa and Jessica. The production will be worthy of the play, some of the Booth and Barrett scenery and costumes being used. Mr. Woollett's admirers in Boston will be present in large numbers and enjoy, though late in the theatrical season, a legitimate treat.

There is a Class of People

Who are injured by the use of coffee. Recently there has been placed in all grocery stores a new preparation called GRAIN-O, made of pure grains, that takes the place of coffee. The most delicate stomach receives it without distress, and but few can tell it from coffee. It does not cost over ¼ as much. Children may drink it with great benefit. 15 cts. and 25 cts. per package. Try it. Ask for GRAIN-O.

IN GOOD TASTE.

Gray, dark blues, wood browns, beige, and black and white are much in evidence, being chosen by women of taste in preference to the glaring greens, blues and purples shown early in the season.

The model in the accompanying illustration is of gray poplin, with a figured silk in black, white and yellow, which is used for the body of the waist, and as pointed panels on either side of the front breadth of the skirt. The vest is of white lace, finished at the top with a frill of the same. The deep belt is of black satin, piped with yellow at both sides, and the collar is of lace.

The hat is of gray straw, with trimming of gray tulle, white feathers and a black bird. Under the brim in the back are yellow roses.

NO STAMP ACT.

The very name of a stamp act is offensive to the American people. Such a tax came into disrepute in connection with the early oppressions of the English government in Colonial times, and its attempted imposition had much to do with the revolution which lost to Great Britain her American possessions, to her great grief and shame. During the late war between the North and the South a stamp act was passed by Congress and submitted by the people without protest as a war measure, like numerous other regulations which the nation would not now tolerate.

The suggestion that Congress should now re-impose that tax in order to relieve certain industries, such as manufacturing, brewing and tobacco growing, should not be tolerated. It may be true that it would yield not far from $18,000,000 a year, but that would be no gain to the citizens at large. All taxes come from the people in one shape or another, and it is largely a question of convenience as to manner and form which is to be considered. And certainly there could not, without the exercise of great ingenuity, be any device more inconvenient and vexatious than one requiring every bank check, every contract, every deed of conveyance, and the like, to have a revenue stamp affixed, as was the case while the war tax enactment continued in force.

While it is true that this is a mere matter of convenience, there are still more serious objections to the proposed measure. "It must be remembered," says the Chicago Times-Herald, "that at present checks form a large proportion of the circulating medium of the country, and a tax upon them, however small, would have the effect of lessening their employment in small transactions. This would in effect limit the circulating medium, and few economists would urge anything that would tend to have such a result."

We do not know just how forcibly this may impress the minds of those who most loudly clamor for more circulation, but it certainly has a somewhat serious aspect that should not be overlooked. It is claimed in other quarters that this objection can be partially met by exempting checks for small sums. How this might work is illustrated by a case which came under the writer's observation at the time, under the last stamp check law, when such checks were exempt, as is now proposed. The president of one of our Rhode Island banks, having occasion to pay a customer the sum of $50, deliberately sat down and made two checks of twenty dollars each and one of ten, and thus saved the two cents for his institution. This was probably an extreme case, as it should have been.

There ought to be a strong protest against such a method of securing revenue as this re-imposition of the most vexatious and most inconvenient method to a majority of the people which can well be devised.

CHURCHES AT WEST POINT.

It will be remembered that Secretary of War Lamont, on the last day of his term of office, granted to the Roman Catholics permission to build a chapel on the grounds of the West Point Military Academy. Since then his successor, General Alger, proceeded to confirm the action of his predecessor, with the further statement that any and every other religious sect which might desire a similar privilege should be granted the opportunity of building a house of worship on precisely the same terms as those of the original grant. All this, though eminently fair to the several churches, opened the way for a peculiar condition of things. We do not pretend to know how many religious bodies there are in the country that this ruling would let in, but they are sufficiently numerous, were each to improve its opportunity, to make a village of churches and chapels for which the public grounds could scarcely afford room. But the way once opened there was no other method left for procedure.

The action of Secretary Lamont was severely criticised from the first, not so much because it was a favor to the Catholics in particular, as that it was a violation of the general principle of non-recognition of sects and religious opinions which has prevailed among us from the first, and from which it is not safe to depart. Since the advent of the present administration this whole question has been reviewed by the Attorney General, who is himself a Roman Catholic, and who has now given an opinion that Secretary Lamont exceeded his authority in making the original grant without an act of Congress, and that it is, therefore, null and void.

No hardship is imposed upon any sect by such an interpretation as that just rendered. The government furnishes ample accommodations on the grounds for all religious services, at its own cost, which is well, as by so doing there is no favoritism in any direction to any class or creed.

A FLOP-OVER.

The New York Sun, hitherto a faithful ally and organ of Tammany, has flopped This is all the more remarkable, as the paper has stood by, and in one sense been the organ of, that peculiar organization through thick and thin for many years. It has always displayed a good degree of independence within the party, but, so far as Tammany is concerned, has seldom halted. Says an exchange: "Throughout all vicissitudes of the Hall, in victory and in defeat, amid all the infamy of corruption and thievery in which it has been detected and exposed, the Sun has stood by the Wigwam like a brother, and opposed every effort on the part of good citizens, whether under Democratic or Republican citizenship, to dislodge Tammany from its former seat of power."

But that the Sun has lost none of its vigor of speech and determination is evident, as it turns its guns on its old friends and associates. It declares: "The way to save the city and its people from bankruptcy next November is to beat Tammany Hall. That organization is now the advocate of repudiation and lawlessness, the debasement of the currency, dishonesty, business ruin, a degraded judiciary, and the destruction of civilization. At the election next November it will be necessary for the commercial, industrial and financial interests of Greater New York to overcome and destroy the revolutionary Tammany. The only issue will be whether this chief centre of American civilization shall be given over to the foes of civilization gathered around the revolutionary standard of Tammany Hall."

But the Sun, true to its instincts, is still to be the agent and supporter of boss rule. Its change of base is from Tammany to Platt, toward whom it has always shown a kindly feeling, and henceforth it may be looked upon as the leading Platt organ of the country. Whether the change is for the better or the worse it is not yet easy to determine.

Word comes from Washington that the leading Republicans of the two houses of Congress have been in consultation, and that, through a comparison of opinions, they have agreed upon a compromise of the differences over the tariff schedules of the Senate and House as voiced by Messrs. Aldrich and Dingley. Not many details are given out, but it is understood that lower rates will at some points prevail than those presented in the Dingley bill. In other words, the taxes levied will be less for protection and more for revenue than was at first proposed. The brewers, who put up a strong fight, are to be rewarded by striking out the beer tax as urged in the Senate, and, if need be, transferring it to tea, stamps and other articles in common use. And so it is now expected that still greater progress will be made in the disposition of the whole question.

Notwithstanding the damage done by the late frosts in the West, there is likely to be good crops the coming autumn. Reports from the Northwest by E. V. Smalley in the New York Evening Post are encouraging. Mr. Smalley finds that trade is everywhere improving to a noticeable extent, bank deposits are increasing and collections are easier. The free silver movement is not as aggressive and intolerant as it used to be, and there is more talk of bimetalism than of free coinage "without the consent or aid of any other nation."

Just as the great garment makers' New York strike, in which the country has become more or less interested, is coming to an end, the announcement is made that the cloak makers of that city are starting out in the same direction. These workers claim that they, too, are not sufficiently paid to be able to live comfortably, and so propose to go out unless their wages are increased. They are about 20,000 in number, and claim to be able to put up a good fight.

The Boston Herald has coined the word "toozeymoozey" to describe John James Ingalls's reportorial work. "There seems to be no doubt that the late Noah Webster, when he built his big book, did not see the necessity for this word, because no one could foresee Ingalls," says a Western paper, which doubtless estimates the Kansas orator at his full value.

The Newport Mercury this day reaches the great age, for a newspaper, of one hundred and thirty-nine years, which is without a parallel on this continent. We extend congratulations to our venerable contemporary.

"FLIES" ON VESSELS.

The "fly" at the masthead is often used as a sign to steer by. It revolves on a pivot, and hence, like a weather vane, shows the direction from which the wind is blowing; whereas, a flag attached to a halyard streams directly astern, or at an angle more or less affected by the speed and course of the vessel. A glance at the fly having shown the wind's direction, a glance at the binnacle shows from what point of the compass it comes. Then, by watching the fly, and thus keeping the ship always at the same angle to the wind, you are able to keep her on her course.

The ships of different nations have distinctive flies. The American and the English fly is a little triangular pennon. German ships often have a small, tapering bag at the masthead, and French vessels a "dog-vane"—a line of corks with colored feathers on a wire. The steamers of the French line from New York to Havre have a dog-vane at each masthead—it is one of their distinguishing marks.

Steering by the fly is one way of steering by the wind, but there are other tricks for finding the wind-point. A sailor can find the point of a stiff breeze by simply letting it blow against his face. In a light air, almost a calm, he lifts his cap and turns his head until he feels the cool breath on his moist brow which is far more sensitive than his sun-tanned face; or he moistens the edge of his hand, and, turning it toward the wind, waves it gently back and forth and to and fro until the coolness of the air is felt on one side of that narrow surface and not on the other. In heavier airs he will moisten the palm of the hand and hold it flat to the wind. The wind-point being found, the ship is sailed as close to the wind as possible, the helmsman keeping his eye on the sail-leech. The least quiver, and a turn of the wheel keeps her off enough to fill her sails; but with an experienced hand on the wheel there will be no quiver along the leech. For an "A. B." can tell by the "feel" of the helm when the ship is about to come up into the wind; as a vessel "comes up" the strain on the rudder is lessened, and by quickly checking her he keeps the sails "rap full and asleep"—keeps them from quivering—and holds her on her course without so much as a glance at the compass.—[Gustav Kobbé, in June St. Nicholas.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, June 5, 8 A. M. For New England—Showers, probably clearing in the interior by Sunday afternoon; variable winds.

FOR BOSTON AND VICINITY.

BOSTON, June 5, 8 A. M. For Boston and vicinity—Cloudiness, with local showers tonight; unsettled but generally fair Sunday; variable winds.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

The weather is far from being settled yet. It is raining this morning along the coast from Atlantic City to Portland, except at Nantucket, the amounts of precipitation registered varying from about half to three fourths of an inch. Cloudiness prevails in the interior of New England and New York state. Clear skies begin at Buffalo and stretch southwestward through the Ohio valley to the Southwest, and westward as far as Chicago. Another cloud area extends from the western lake region over the upper valleys to Montana, with a small depression in the barometer central in Manitoba. The present conditions foretell unsettled weather here tomorrow, but generally fair. The temperature has fallen decidedly in the lake regions, registering slightly below 40 in the northern lakes and about 40 around Lake Michigan. It also continues cool in the Northwest. New England temperature ranged at 8 o'clock from 40, at Eastport, to 60, at Nantucket. Dense fog prevails on the southeastern Massachusetts coast.

FINANCIAL.

NEW YORK, June 5, Wall Street—The stock market opened strong and active, with Sugar at 117¼, Chicago Gas at 89⅞, Burlington at 79¾, Rock Island at 69½, St. Paul at 77½, Northwestern at 110, Louisville at 47¼, Western Union at 79¼, Southern preferred at 29½, Manhattan at 84⅞, and New Jersey Central at 95.

11—There was no diminution in the volume of dealings and general strength was displayed all through the list. The Industrials were the features, and moved up rapidly on the execution of liberal orders for both accounts. Sugar touched 118 and Leather preferred also gained a point. Chicago Gas eased off from the top figure in response to realizing orders, but the offerings were well taken and the stock soon displayed an improved tone.

The general symptoms developed in Wall street during the past week have been the most hopeful features witnessed for many months past. Without any special stimulus or speculative effort, there has been a marked revival of buying operations and, with few exceptions, an advance in prices throughout the Exchange list. There has been an extensive settlement of "short" accounts, without any attempt at compulsion from the "bull" side; and although that has been one cause of the advance in quotations, yet the rise has been equally due to an increase of outside buying and a general gain of buoyancy of tone.—[Henry Clews.

Closing—Money on call, nominally at 1 @1½ per cent; prime mercantile paper, 3½ @ 4 per cent; sterling exchange, steady, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.86¾ @ $7 for demand, and $4.85¼ @ 8⅝ for sixty days; posted rates, $4.86½ @ 87, and $4.88 @ 4; commercial bills, $4.85; bar silver, 60; Mexican dollars, 47¼; government bonds, strong; state bonds, dull; railroad bonds, strong; new 4s, reg., 124½; new 4s, coup., 124½. The announcement that the Gas consolidation bill had been signed by the governor of Illinois was the signal for renewed sales of Chicago Gas to take profits, which led to a fall in price of 1, with partial recovery. Missouri Pacific also exhibited heaviness, and lost ⅞ of the extreme rise of 1¼. The general market held steady at about the best prices, with the dealings widely distributed. A number of the usually inactive shares improved to a marked degree. Large blocks of Sugar changed hands, at 115 to 118¾. The net gains were a point or more in most of the prominent stocks. Total sales today, 188,000.

NEW YORK, June 5.—The weekly bank statement shows the following changes: Reserve, decrease, $1,226,275; loans, increase, $1,400,000; specie, increase, $231,700; legal tenders, decrease, $213,200; deposits, increase, $5,655,100; circulation, decrease, $6,700.

Today's Games.

Newport at Taunton, New Bedford at Fall River, Pawtucket at Brockton.

Newport, 4; Brockton, 2.

The Brocktons, who are next to the Newports in the New England League race, and who expect to be first at the finish, played their second game of the season on Freebody Park yesterday, and lost. The reputation of the team for winning away from home and the fact that the players were out for blood made the visitors the favorites with the sporting fraternity, who were badly bitten, the people who did not know but who blindly back the home team being heavy winners. And Manager Burnham was a heavy-hearted loser.

The weather was warm and the sun hot—an ideal day for base ball—and fully seven hundred persons were in attendance to see what was expected to be, and what proved to be, one of the best games of the season. At no time was the result settled until Nadeau closed the ninth inning by striking out. Then the cranks breathed easier, and went away happy. There were brilliant catches, noisy coaching, a grim determination to win, and some very close shaves, scattered through the contest, which it was easy to see both sides wanted to win.

The Newports opened poorly, being too anxious to run bases and throwing away chances in the early part of the first. Then Brockton went in, and it looked as if they were going to bat out the game right there. Nadeau hit to Bean and Hickey hit safely, but Sheckard knocked a foul to right, which Stephenson got by very quick work, and doubled Hickey at first.

This play was a forerunner of what the Newports were to do during the game, for to the end they played a very strong fielding game, which made Gallagher's good pitching effective. The visitors hit harder and oftener, but their fielding at first was "sloppy," and Newport by care might have scored more often.

Toward the close both teams played fast, and it required safe hits to win a run. In the seventh Nadeau made a difficult catch off Gallagher, and Rollins followed with a brilliant capture of a foul from Gilbert, which called forth prolonged applause. Crisham in the same inning made a one-handed catch of a foul tip from Hickey's bat.

The star plays of the game, however, were in the fifth. Cochnaur opened with a fly just back of second, which Gilbert took on the run. Nadeau hit for a single and Hickey for a double. Sheckard put up a foul fly, which Dinsmore caught after a hard run. Henry batted to right field, apparently for a safe hit, which would have sent in two runs and tied the score. Kelley jumped into the air and brought it down, and the crowd went wild—as well it might, for that catch probably saved the day.

Stephenson played an exceptionally strong game in the right garden, and when hits were needed Gallagher, as usual, was effective. Newport scored in the fourth on Stephenson's base on balls, Crisham's two-bagger and two wild throws; in the fifth on hits by Gallagher, Grant and Pickett, and in the ninth on Bean's base on balls, and Dinsmore's pretty and unexpected double and fast running. Brockton scored in the fourth on singles by Sheckard and Krieg on Henry's sacrifice, and in the seventh on Cochnaur's single, a wild pitch and Nadeau's fly to Gilbert. The score follows:

New Bedford, 3; Fall River, 2.

New Bedford administered defeat to Fall River in the ninth inning yesterday by timely hitting. Gerry and Flanagan both pitched good ball, and the batsmen of both teams were unable to place them safe with any degree of success. The New Bedford team is badly crippled, Birmingham playing first base, Tighe being ill, and Counihan second base, as Davis is injured. Attendance, 600.

Pawtucket, 9; Taunton, 6.

Knorr pitched his first game for Pawtucket yesterday and was hit hard, but, although receiving poor support, his team won by batting Ashe in two innings. Beaumont was hit in the jaw by a batted ball and hurt, but pluckily continued to play.

Struck out—By Ashe—Knorr; by Knorr—Burke, Herwig, Ashe. Hit by pitched ball—By Ashe—Whiting. Umpire—Breckenridge. Time—2h. 30m.

Taunton's Re-organization.

The Taunton men who have agreed to support the team financially yesterday organized by the election of H. Q. Presbrey as president, Alderman Charles J. Nichols as secretary, James R. Smith treasurer, and Edward F. Burns vice president, and these and Dr. M. C. Golden, Joseph S. Burns and James P. Dunn as directors. John Irwin gave a history of the game in Taunton. He went there late, and was introduced to Dr. Richards of Boston, who agreed to back the team, later introducing J. P. Earle, who was made treasurer. These men, after the game was found to be a success in Taunton, antagonized him, and finally he looked for new backers; then they tried to get rid of him. Dr. Richards disappeared, taking, it was estimated, about $000 of the funds and leaving a debt of about $1,800. Irwin thought if this were paid, and the club strengthened and given confidence, money could be made. He agreed to turn over his franchise if he were retained as manager. His plans were adopted, and later the newly formed organization was accepted as a member of the league.

Notes.

The New England League directors yesterday voted to throw out the game forfeited to Newport on Election morning because of the non-appearance of the New Bedfords. This takes away one of the victories credited to Newport. As a matter of discipline in the league, the forfeit ought to stand. It was a holiday game, and Connie Murphy and his Whalers could have been here as well as not. If a team is allowed to disappoint another like this, it will be hard work for the umpires to enforce the rules.

Manager Marston of Fall River has signed Pitcher Jack Stivetts, late of Boston, and he will appear against New Bedford today. It looks as though Fall River would soon be in it, if enough ex-league men can be secured.

Monday the University of Vermont team will play here. Yesterday this team defeated Wesleyan at Middletown, 4 to 3, in a fast game.

Monday afternoon the Holy Cross consolidated team will play the Fort Adams nine at the fort.

The Brocktons acted yesterday as though they owned the league. President Keith has considerable of a pull, and Manager Burnham is foxy, but there are rules to be observed, and Brockton, as well as New Bedford, ought to be made to obey them. If they are allowed to override the umpires there will be trouble. All the other clubs try to obey the rules, without being abusive or trying to hurt players.

"How would this do for the strongest team in the New England league, batting, fielding and all points considered: Pitchers, Hawley, Day and Todd; catchers, Crisham and Murphy; first base, Beaumont; second base, Hickey; third base, Magoon; short stop, Harrington; left field, Nadeau; centre field, Gilbert; right field, Sheckard? Would not that be a fast and lively aggregation?"—[Brockton Enterprise.

"Perhaps. But the infield is not a very heavy hitting one, neither is it the fastest fielding team. Who ever heard of Magoon as a slugger, or Harrington, or Hickey? Then it is rather early to pick All-New England teams."—[New Bedford Mercury.

Where do Stouch and Bean and Weisbecker and Kelley, not to mention Dowd, stand? They are all worthy of consideration for such a list.

National League games yesterday—New York, 5; Louisville, 3. Chicago, 8; Washington, 5. Brooklyn, 8; St. Louis, 4. The Pittsburg-Philadelphia game was declared a forfeit to the Philadelphias, because the Pittsburgs were delaying the game in the hope of rain. The actual score was 4 to 0 in favor of the Philadelphias. The games in Boston and Baltimore were stopped by rain.

Eastern League games—Providence, 8; Rochester, 1, and Rochester, 19; Providence, 4. Springfield, 12; Syracuse, 4. Toronto, 11; Wilkesbarre, 1. Buffalo, 4; Scranton, 2, and Scranton, 9; Buffalo, 2.

Amherst defeated Dartmouth, 7 to 6.

POLICE NOTES.

W. J. Stewart of East Boston was before Judge Baker this morning, charged with the larceny from a fish-house of a pair of rubber boots, the property of John Conglilin. Stewart was fined $5 and costs, but was unable to pay, and was taken to the Providence county jail, where it will take him until after the national holiday to "work out" the sentence.

Martin Lowry has been sent to the State Workhouse for six months, being charged with "sleeping out" nights.

Edward Cooney, while under the influence of liquor, fell on Thames street last night, and was injured so badly as to call for his removal by the police to the hospital.

THE FALL RIVER LINE BOATS.

Monday the Plymouth will take the place of the Priscilla on the Fall River line, and the big boat will go to New York to be hauled out on the dry dock. On her return the Puritan will be hauled out, and will be followed by the Plymouth and Pilgrim before the time for the double service to begin.

There is some talk about there being no double service this year, but the boats are being made ready for it, and so far as is known here, the four boats will be in commission this summer. The talk is probably due to the well-known wishes of the railroad company to have the other steamboat lines which they control better patronized. If, however, the public demand calls for four boats on the Fall River line, there is no doubt but they will be furnished by the company.

LICENSES IN TIVERTON.

The newly elected Tiverton town council will meet the first part of next week to organize. A measure will be introduced to issue tavern licenses, which allow the holders the same privileges as are exercised by the victualers here, and it is thought by many that the proposition will be favorably considered. The fee will be $10 per annum, and as a large number will want them the revenues of the town will be greatly increased by their granting.—[Fall River Globe.

BLOWN TO ATOMS.

Explosion of Gases in a Mud Scow in Tow of a Tug.

CHICAGO, June 5.—One of the three mud scows in tow of tug Andrew H. Green was blown to atoms this morning by an explosion of gases just after having passed through the Rush Street draw. The explosion was heard for a great distance and all the buildings in the vicinity were shaken to their foundations. August Americus, who was on the scow, was blown into the river and drowned before help could reach him.

During the past week the company has been engaged in dredging the south branch in the vicinity of the Bridgeport gas works, and the general theory is advanced that in some manner the gases in the scow became ignited by a spark from the tug.

A portion of the Goodrich dock was shattered and considerable damage was done to the buildings in the vicinity. Frank Morton, night agent of the Graham & Morton Transportation Company, was thrown from his bed and severely bruised by flying timbers. The Rush Street bridge was shaken to its foundation, and it is feared has been damaged.

BULLET-PROOF CLOTH.

Shots from a Revolver Fail to Pierce a New Material.

CHICAGO, June 5.—With the dead body of a woman for a target, a bullet-proof cloth invented by Casimir Zeglena, a cloistered brother of the Order of Resurrectionists, was tested last evening at the Chicago College of Dental Surgery, in the presence of a number of professors, army officers and citizens interested in the science of bodily armor. The test was conducted under the supervision of Lieutenant Stanislaus de Korwin Sarnecki of the Austrian army. A .41 calibre revolver was first put into practice, after the upper portion of the body had been focussed in the alleged impenetrable cloth. Thirty shots failed to pierce the cloth, fired at a distance of from three to fifteen paces. A .38 calibre revolver was then brought into use, and the representative of the inventor demonstrated that it was impossible to puncture the texture with such a missile. While the cloth or outer portion of the armor had been disfigured but slightly, an examination later by Dr. Leonard C. Borland revealed the fact that two or three ribs on the right side of the body had been shattered by the force of the bullet coming in contact with the bullet-proof cloth. Aside from the bruises in those parts of the body with which the bullets came in direct contact, there was no indication that bullets had been directed against it.

HISTORIC WRECKS.

In 1717 a ship, pirate Whydah, commanded by the notorious Bellamy, laden with spoils and seeking more, was wrecked on Cape Cod in a terrible gale. More than one hundred dead bodies lay along the shore, and it was said all but two of the crew (an Englishman and an Indian) perished in the waves. It was a tradition on the Cape for years that the Englishman, disguised, used to visit the scene of the shipwreck from time to time to supply himself with money buried from the wreck. If true, the man must have had great strength of body and presence of mind to find and bury treasure after such a fearful tussle with wind and wave when all his comrades were drowning near him. A short time before the wreck Bellamy had captured seven prizes, and placing seven of his crew on one of these—the Province Snow—had promised the Cape Cod captain his vessel if he would pilot his fleet into Provincetown harbor. It is said that this captain, watching his chance when the pirates were stupid with drink, ran his vessel close inshore, where the crew escaped with their lives, but were taken, and afterwards tried before a special court of admiralty in Boston, and executed the following November. The Whydah, following the pilot, ventured too near the coast, and the gale of April 26, 1717, drove her to her destruction. An old account, written by Levi Whitman in 1810, says: "At times to this day there are King William and Queen Mary's coppers picked up, and pieces of silver called cobmoney. The violence of the sea moves the sands upon the outer bar, so that at times the iron caboose of the ship at low ebb has been seen."

Judge Sewall tells the same story of the wreck. Thoreau found one of the pennies, and his "Wellfleet oysterman" said that he had seen the iron caboose of the Whydah on the bars at an extremely low course of tides.

Captain William Kidd, the notorious pirate, who was tried in London, and executed for piracy in the year 1701, had a ship called the Quidah, or Quedagh, an East India merchantman which he had captured near the mouth of the Red sea. He then sailed for the West Indies, and finding that the English had proclaimed him pirate and ordered his arrest, left the Quedagh with twenty-two of the pirates and sailed to the north. There is a tradition that these pirates transferred their property to another, less unwieldy ship, and burned the East Indiaman. Another tradition is that she was brought into the Hudson, and, being chased by an English man-of-war, was sunk near the Highlands with most of her treasure. It is certain that there was visible for a time the wreck of some large ship sunk in the sands at that place.—[Harper's Round Table.

"ORIGINAL PACKAGES."

The "original package" question is a very puzzling one. A few years ago, when the scheme was devised of sending liquors into prohibition states for sale in bottles, casks, or barrels, Congress, in the exercise of its power to regulate commerce among the several states, passed a law providing that all liquors transported into any state should immediately become subject to the laws of that state, and should not be exempted therefrom by reason of being introduced in original packages. When South Carolina adopted the dispensary system, by which the state monopolizes the control of the traffic, this law, in connection with a provision in the dispensary law, was relied upon to prevent the selling of imported liquors by private parties. Recently, however, Judge Simonton of the United States circuit court decided that, when a state recognizes and approves the sale of liquors and itself engages in the traffic, "it is not a lawful exercise of the police power to forbid the importation of such liquors or their sale in original packages for personal use and consumption, such prohibition under those circumstances being in conflict with the laws of interstate and foreign commerce." The case will of course be carried to the Supreme Court. Should that tribunal sustain Judge Simonton's position, the dispensary law would be practically nullified. —[New York Post.

NATIONAL MELODIES OF ENGLAND.

Songs of the British People Are of the Hymn-Like Class.

It has been said that if a man were permitted to make all the ballads, he did not care who should make all the laws, of a nation. In them and through them speaks the spirit of the people; and no surer basis will be found for cultivating musical tastes among the wholly uneducated public. Intellectual music can never be the commencement of taste; but the people's songs are, for they show the natural musical bent of a nation, and, if good and numerous, cannot fail to point out the characteristics which cultivation may be expected to evoke from musicians. This seems already proved in the case of England, where the national airs, taken as a whole, all possess more or less hymn-like characteristics. The greatest English composers have certainly always excelled in devotional music; for madrigal music might well come under such a head, and in appreciation of it England stands first, for it is assuredly the home, if not the birthplace, of oratorio. It is said that a great German conductor of the present day never had occasion to conduct "The Messiah" until he did so in England; which if correct, testifies somewhat forcibly to the nation's peculiar attachment to sacred music. The hymn-like class of airs comprises by far the largest number of English melodies. A second division may be made of those to celebrate great national events or possessions.

William Chappell, in his delightful book on English national airs, gives an interesting account of the earliest national singing in England of which there is any record, dating about 1155. He says: "The Britons do not sing their tunes in unison, like the inhabitants of other countries, but in different parts, so that when a company of singers meets to sing, as many different parts are heard as there are singers. In North Britain the inhabitants make use of a kind of symphonious harmony, but with only two differences in varieties of tone and voice, the one murmuring the under part, the other singing the upper in a manner equally soft and pleasing: * * * this they do, not so much by art as by a habit peculiar to themselves; * * * only those of the North sing in this manner." It is interesting to find that Northern choirs, whose tone and tune are still so far in advance of those of the South, owe their superiority to the inheritance of centuries.

The earliest specimens of English national melody we believe to be found in the well-known madrigal "Summer is a-coming in," which dates about 1250. One of its earliest arrangements was as a six-part song for men; but it is now generally accepted that this was formed on an original national song, "selected, according to the custom of the time, as a basis for harmony." In those early days the position of minstrel was very prominent and important. No great house was without its minstrel band, whose payment was far in advance of that of the ordinary clergy. In the fourteenth century music seems to have been almost as general as it is at present. The instruments used were the "harp, psaltery, rebec, fiddle, bagpipe, flute, trumpet, rote and cithern."

With the reign of Henry VIII the really interesting period of English national airs began; and it may be worth while to know a little about the various collections that have been made of them. The earliest printed collection of songs is one now in the British Museum. It belonged to Wynkyn de Worde. Its words are nearly all secular, and show a decided "folk-character," though the music, as far as can be judged from the small portion that remains of it, was in the style of the contemporary Netherlandish school.

About the most celebrated collection is one in six volumes entitled "D'Urfey's Pills to Purge Melancholy," published about 1719, the preface to which is so amusing in its self-conceit that a few words of it must be retailed here. The compiler, speaking of himself, proceeds to state that he "must presume to say scarce any man could have performed (collected) the like. My double genius for music and poetry giving me still that ability which others might want." No doubt such things are still occasionally thought by authors, but we doubt if ever so barefaced an assertion has been maintained in print.

Another curious old song-book is Bickam's "Musical Entertainer," with most elaborate engravings as headings to each ditty. This, like many others of its time, is written for voice and flute. The really valuable collection of English airs is John Stafford Smith's "Musica Antiqua," published in 1812.

To return to the commencement of the sixteenth century. We are told by Erasmus, speaking of the English of that date, that "they challenge the prerogative of being the most accomplished in the skill of music of any people." In those days, also, music was occasionally exported to Italy in contrast to the more usual practice of a later date.

The accounts given by Pasqualigo, the Venetian ambassador to Henry VIII's court, are most flattering to English music, and Henry's own love of song and of composition is proved to have been very considerable by what he left behind him. "The King's Ballad," the manuscript of which is in the British Museum, was one of the most popular melodies of its time; and, indeed, deservedly so.

Passing on to the time of Elizabeth, whose long reign was one burst of melody, the difficulty of selection among the endless national airs of this date becomes very serious. Song was the order of the day. Says Mr. Chappell: "Tinkers sang catches; milkmaids sang ballads; carters whistled; each trade, and even the beggars, had their special songs. The base-viol hung in the drawing-room for the amusement of waiting visitors. The lute, cithern, and virginals, for the amusement of waiting customers, were the necessary furniture of the barber's shop. They had music at dinner, at supper, at weddings, at funerals, at night, at dawn, at work, at play."

The reigns of James I and Charles I gave us many songs which are still household words. "Once I loved a maiden fair," "You gentlemen of England" (originally "Countrlemen of England"), are thoroughly familiar to every one. So is "Since first I saw your face," by Thomas Ford, conspicuous as being the work of a musician of some standing in his time, and for the author's name being known to posterity, both rare events where national music is concerned.

The Commonwealth was a sad time for music, and national melodies fared badly like the rest. Still, we have a certain number, mostly from the collection of "Loyal Songs," of which the dates are easily classified; for there is hardly one of them that does not in some way express the political feelings of the time. They naturally emanated from the Cavaliers, obliged to assert themselves in words, where they could not in deeds, and they had a "God Save the King" of those days entitled "Vive le Roi," in which they certainly did not spare their antagonists.

With the opening of the reign of Charles II came that fine popular song, "Here's a health unto His Majesty." We wonder that it has not been (as far as we are aware) observed, however, that this tune is almost identical with that of "Once I loved a maiden fair," of which it is hardly even an adaptation.—[A. M. Wakefield, in Werner's Magazine.

THE MODERN VIOLIN.

There is a popular belief that the violin makers of today cannot rival the famous old instruments made by Amati, Stradivarius, Guarnerius and other Italian masters. It has been supposed that these men possessed some special secrets, not only about the kind of wood which should be used, but also concerning the methods of preparing it. They were said to have had mysterious chemical processes for drying the wood and adding to its power of vibration.

According to a modern authority, however, it would seem that all these beliefs must be added to the list of exploded superstitions, and the fiddles made by American manufacturers today are every bit as sweet-toned as any Amati or Stradivarius of them all. Parts of beams taken from old houses, broken and useless furniture and old chests are transformed into instruments the tones of which even virtuosi are unable to distinguish from tohse of old "Strads" and Amatis.

The woods used, however, though old, must be of the best quality, and the greatest care must be exercised in cutting to the requisite degree of thinness. The string-and-bow material also needs to be selected with great care. It seems doubtful whether catgut was ever really used for strings, though it is related that Tom Hood once prayed Heaven to "reward the man who first hit upon the very original notion of sawing the inside of a cat with the tail of a horse." Horsehair is always used for bows; but for a long time past violin strings have been made from the intestines of lambs and sheep, reared on dry, mountainous pastures. It is stated that the intestines must be taken from the bodies while they are yet warm, and immediately stretched and scraped. September is the month when strings are made; and the process is said to be long, tedious and far from agreeable.

The bow is perhaps the most distinctive and important part of the violin, yet is, on the whole, the least difficult to make. It is of horsehair, fastened on a light flexible wooden frame. By its skillful use it is said that one bar of music may be given in fifty-four different ways. Great knowledge and skill are required in the fitting of the bridge to the violin—an undertaking over which a careful workman will sometimes spend days.—[Chicago News.

USE COLOR JUDICIOUSLY.

There are colors that are refreshing and broadening, others that absorb light and give a boxed-up appearance to a room, others that make a room with a bleak northern exposure, or with no exposure at all, appear bright and cheerful; some that make a room appear warm, some that make it cold.

The thermometer seems to fall six degrees when you walk into a blue room. Yellow is an advancing color; therefore a room fitted up in yellow will appear smaller than it is. On the other hand, blue of a certain shade introduced generously into a room will give an idea of space. Red makes no difference in regard to size. Green makes very little.

If a bright, sunny room gets its light from a space obtruded upon by russet-colored or yellow-painted houses, or else looks out upon a stretch of green grass, it should be decorated in a color very different from the shade chosen if the light comes from only an unbroken expanse of sky. Red brings out in a room whatever hint of green lurks in the composition of the other colors employed. Green needs sunlight to develop the yellow in it and make it seem cheerful. If olive or red brown be used in conjunction with mahogany furniture the effect is very different from what it would be if blue were used. Blue would develop the tawny orange lurking in the mahogany.

If a ceiling is to be made higher, leave it light, that it may appear to recede. Deepening the color used on the ceiling would make it lower—an effect desirable if the room is small and the ceiling very high. Various tones of yellow are substitutes for sunlight.—[The Upholsterer.

IS THE EARTH TOP-SHAPED?

Nansen's discovery of a deep Arctic basin has suggested to M. de Lapparent that the real shape of the earth may be that of a top, with the South Pole as its spinning point. This theory results from considering that the area we may now assign to the Arctic ocean is almost the same as that given by Murray to the Antarctic continent (about 1,750,000 square miles), while the depths observed by Nansen correspond in order of magnitude to the heights observed by Ross. Such a supposition, it is added, would tend to reconcile the slight differences of astronomers and geodesists as to the ratio of the polar and equatorial diameters. The latter base their value of the polar flattening (1-294) upon measurements made almost entirely in the northern hemisphere, and the value obtained by M. Tisserand from the precession of the equinoxes (1-297) may prove sensibly correct if the effect of a south polar protuberance upon the form of the sea surface is considered.

WONDERFUL GLACIERS OF ALASKA.

Three Miles Wide and Three Hundred Feet in Thickness.

To the average mind this territory is a small piece of land, with a few outlying islands far to the north, and possessing but few points of interest to any other than the trader eager to swap brightly tinted calicoes for luxuriant furs, the miner in pursuit of the phantom fortune, the missionary with an earnest zeal to save the savages, and the ubiquitous tourist who considers the country as a place to be viewed only from the deck of a steamer. The latter class stands aghast when informed that Alaska comprises an area almost as big as the entire United States east of the Mississippi. With unmistakable incredulity they receive the statement that there are mountain peaks contained within our boundaries so high and so mighty that other mountains in the United States are as mere molehills in comparison, and when old of our marvelous glaciers and vast icefields, wonderment is no longer concealed, and they realize for the first time the immensity of the country which to so many is but as a sealed volume.

In the vast moraine of ice back of and surrounding Mt. St. Elias the state of Rhode Island could be placed, and would be only as a flyspeck on a sheet of spotless paper; the state of Delaware might be dropped into a crevasse, and its sides would never be scratched in its descent to the bottom. Visions of glaciers, as seen from an excursion steamer, are confined to the Takou Inlet and Glacier bay. Soon after leaving Wrangel the first mountain of ice is seen in the distance, looking like a frozen river emerging from the clouds. The sea is glassy, and a procession of small bergs, broken away from the glaciers, float silently toward the south. It is nature's dead march to the sun, to be melted in its burning kisses and be transplanted into its happy tears. Wild ducks fly past, and from its eyrie a bald-headed eagle surveys the scene, deeply, darkly, beautifully blue, apparently conscious that he is the symbol of the republic.

At Glacier bay on the first sight of Muir glacier one draws comparisons and mentally notes that there are glaciers and glaciers. In Switzerland a glacier is a vast bed of dirty air-holed ice that has fastened itself like a porous plaster to the side of an Alp, and distance alone lends enchantment to the view. In Alaska a glacier is a wonderful torrent that seems to have been suddenly frozen when about to plunge into the sea. Down and about mountains wind these snowclad serpents, extending miles inward, with as many arms, frequently, as an octopus. Wonderfully picturesque is the Davidson glacier, but more extended is the one named in honor of John Muir, which marks the extreme northerly point of the route traveled by the excursion steamers. Imagine a glacier three miles wide and three hundred feet high at its mouth. Think of Niagara Falls frozen stiff, add thirty-six feet to its height, and you will have a slight idea of the terminus of Muir glacier, in front of which your steamer anchors; picture a background of mountains fifteen thousand feet high, all clad in a mantle of perpetual snow, and then imagine a gorgeous sun lighting up the ice crystals with all the hues of a multicolored rainbow, and you will have a vision such as would have delighted the soul of Raphael. The face of the glacier takes on the color of aquamarine, the tint of every particle of floating ice, big and little, that surrounds the steamer and sometimes proves such an impediment to navigation. These glaciers are constantly moving and tumbling headlong into the sea, and as the huge masses fall the ear is startled by submarine thunder, the echoes of which resound far and near. Down, down, down goes the berg, and woe to the boat in its way when it again rises to the surface.—[Alaska News.

THE CONVOCATION JOURNAL'S VALEDICTORY.

In announcing the discontinuance of the Convocation Journal with the present number, a word of explanation is due to those who have valued and sustained it for the past five and a half years. The Journal's unvarying purpose has been to accentuate the essential unity of parochial and missionary work; it has been both a parochial and a missionary paper, devoted to the particular interests of this district. It has, therefore, been conducted for a special purpose, never for personal profit, and on two occasions it has had to appeal to its constituents and beneficiaries for pecuniary help.

For the past three years the paper has been managed by substantially the same board of editors, who received it from their predecessors in debt, and found it necessary to promptly raise $250 to put it again upon its feet. For nearly three years it has been conducted upon the same plans and under the same contract for publication.

About February 1, 1897, the question was again raised as to its financial condition, and, on calling in all personal guarantees, the outstanding debt was found to be $231. The existing contract was cancelled, new bids were called for and two were received, under one of which the paper has been since carried on at a cost safely within its actual revenue. Its advertisments for the past quarter have been at a rate which would pay the yearly cost of publication within $20, while the cash subscription list was ample to cover this and provide for incidental expenses.

At the recent annual meeting the treasurer reported the outstanding debt as reduced to $188, for the raising of which the paper would have to rely on special subscriptions, possible assessments, or an extension of its advertising and subscription lists. It proved, however, that the new executive committee, which is by standing order the board of editors, was wholly unwilling to undertake the labor and responsibility of editorship, and the convocation had no resource but to discontinue the paper.

The Journal has served an excellent purpose in disseminating missionary news from all parts of the world; it has steadfastly championed Newport interests; it has earnestly supported Newport enterprises; it has heartily co-operated in Newport work, and it has tried to neutralize the wretched parochialism with which Newport has been hitherto afflicted. We sincerely trust that the new executive committee will speedily devise some equally serviceable agency for helping on the good work to which we are all unreservedly committed—pro Christo et Ecclesia!—[Convocation Journal.

ONE MILLIONAIRE'S START.

A young German immigrant who had not a dollar in the world, and no relatives, friends or acquaintances in America, worked his way westward from New York until he reached a small town in Ohio, where he secured a position as clerk in a flour and feed store and went to work. In almost an incredibly short time he learned the English language and had mastered the few details of the business he was in.

One day he walked into another feed store a few blocks away, said that he had heard that the proprietor of the place desired to sell out and inquired the price. The feed dealer wanted $1,500. After a few inquiries the caller said:

"All right; I will call tomorrow at 10 and we'll go over to the bank and get the money."

No one knew anything about the young German. The feed store man who wanted to sell jumped to the conclusion that the prospective purchaser must have brought considerable money from Germany. The next day, promptly on time, the German called to take possession.

"Come on," he said, "we'll go right over to the bank now and get the money."

Together they entered the bank. The German approached the cashier's window, introduced himself and said:

"Dis is Mr. Jones, who keeps the feed store on Main street. I haf bought out his place for $1,500, and ve haf called to get the money."

"I beg your pardon," replied the cashier, "but you have no account here, have you?"

"You don't understand," earnestly remarked the German. "I don't vant an account at all; I vant only the money."

"But you have no money in this bank," explained the official.

"Of course not," assented the caller. "If I had money I vould pay dis man myself. But I haven't any money at all, so I must come to you to get it."

"But we can't let you have money unless you first give it to us."

"Then why is a bank?" excitedly demanded the would-be borrower.

The colloquy which ensued waxed so loud that the president of the bank came out of his private office to see what was the matter. He took the young German in hand personally. The latter told the banker all about himself and his aims, and in less than a half hour the bank had loaned him $1,500 and held a first mortgage on a feed store owned by the happiest young foreigner in America.

That occurred many years ago. It is true, but that young German today is the head of a corporation capitalized at $1,000,000, and his name, if I were to give it here, would be recognized as one of the leading business men of this country.—[Chicago Times-Herald.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S ADDRESS.

Editorial Comment Upon the Assistant Secretary's Suggestions.

The assistant secretary of the navy, Mr. Roosevelt, made a very interesting address at the opening of the Naval War College at Newport. There were present on the occasion a number of noted naval officers, and the character of Mr. Roosevelt's address was on a topic of interest to practically everybody present. The assistant secretary spoke on Washington's forgotten maxim, and his interpretation of those significant words was made in connection with the future policy of naval construction. Mr. Roosevelt expressed his opinions strongly and he had much to say in their support.

The chief feature of interest in the assistant secretary's address was his assertion that, while torpedo boats and cruisers were well enough in their way, the United States would be obliged to depend in time of war chiefly upon the battleships in the American navy. For that reason he deems it indispensable that the United States should have at least twenty large battleships; and in his opinion these floating fortresses would be, not menaces of war, but sureties of peace. At the same time, if war should ever come, it would not find the United States unprepared if these battleships were immediately available.

In such reports of Mr. Roosevelt's speech as were sent to this city, there was no specific mention made of one problem which must arise in this connection. Before new battleships are built, the fact must be considered that the United States has available upon the Atlantic coast hardly a single large dry dock of modern construction suitable for the accommodation of even such battleships as are now in commission. The Norfolk dry dock and the Brooklyn dry dock have shown structural weaknesses and such disadvantages of location as to make it very doubtful whether they will ever be of any service for the accommodation of battleships.

Before Congress is requested to build more battleships, therefore, it is of the highest importance that there should be constructed at the "deep water yards," like those at Boston and Portsmouth, large modern dry docks for the accommodation of battleships. As Boston has the larger commerce and the more important industrial facilities the Charlestown dock should be constructed as soon as possible; and until the dock is built it is almost useless to talk about building more battleships.—[Boston Advertiser.

Mr. Theodore Roosevelt delivered an address before the Naval College on his favorite topic, "In time of peace, prepare for war." He is said to have attributed the maxim to Washington, but that can hardly be, for it is at least as old as Rome. Those who cite it, however, usually forget that when they call upon us to "prepare for war," the advice is of no use unless they tell us how much to prepare, and for what war we are to prepare, and with whom. We are always ready for the Indians, or the Canadians, or the Mexicans, or the South or Central Americans. But are we ready for a war with England, or Russia, or, say, Europe combined, to force us to give up the Monroe doctrine? We fear not. To be ready for these foes we should need to spend about $150,000,000 a year, which we should have to raise by taxes, and we find it difficult to make our revenue meet our present expenses. The fact is that "in time of peace, prepare for war" is a maxim which now chiefly pleases naval contractors and those dependent on them. They are the only class who cannot have too much preparation for war. Every new battleship that goes to the bottom, or becomes a hulk owing to her fashion being out of date, shows how necessary more preparation is.—[New York Post.

No one who knows Theodore Roosevelt's record in civil office can accuse him of neglecting the cultivation of moral courage while advocating physical courage. But there is a note of the fighter pure and simple in the address he made at the Naval War College in Newport which savors of recklessness. There have an adequate navy. There is no doubt that "to be prepared for war is the most effectual means to promote peace." In the light of the recent history in this country and in Europe, there is grave doubt that patriotism will gain from such words as these from Mr. Roosevelt:

"In this country there is not the slightest danger of an over-development of war like spirit, and there never has been any such danger. * * * All the great masterful races have been fighting races, and the minute that a race loses the hard fighting virtues, then, no matter what else it may retain, no matter how skilled in commerce and finance, in science or art, it has lost its proud right to stand as the equal of the best."

To inculcate the fighting spirit is hardly the way to go about the sort of preparations for war that promote peace.—[New York Commercial Advertiser.

Harper's Weekly has secured a most timely serial in "The Vintage," by E. F. Benson, author of "Dodo," "Limitations," and other popular novels, the first instalment of which is to appear in a few weeks. The scene is laid in Grécco during the war of independence earlier in the century, and the difficulties experienced by the Greeks in the narrative are said to be similar to those they have encountered in their recent contest with their old enemy. Among the important features during June will be the long-delayed description of the "New American Navy," by Lieutenant Commander J. D. J. Kelley, U. S. N., with a four-page illustration giving a view of all the ships, and illustrated articles on the "New Library at Princeton," the "Cuban War," the "New Era in Canada" and the "Chess Match between the House of Commons and the House of Representatives."

Look After Your Tin Roof.

A tin roof is as good as any other roof. Tin gutters are all right; they, as well as the tin roof, will last for many years if you give them a coat of paint once in a while. But you must put on the best material; it is the cheapest in the end.

WHAT TO USE.

Prince's metallic or mineral brown is the best roofing paint made. It has no sediment in it; will not scale, crack, chalk or fade. The genuine has a double label on every package. Do not take the one-label packages, they are all imitatives. Most of them contain enough sulphur to destroy any tin roof in six months to a year. We have the genuine article—we handle no other. It costs no more than the poorer grade and is sure to give satisfaction. REMEMBER THE TWO LABELS. You can get it at 69 Mill St.

THE DEAD PHYSICIAN.

The funeral of the late Dr. Henry E. Turner took place at noon today at the United Congregational Church, where there was a large gathering of representative citizens to pay a last tribute of respect to the man and physician whom they honored and esteemed.

The services were conducted by Rev. T. C. McClelland, Ph. D., pastor of the church, who, after prayer and scripture reading, gave a brief address on the character of the deceased. Dr. Turner's life was lived in the life of the community. It was like a holy temple, whose portals now are closed. Strength and beauty were blended in his life. Intense loyalty was one of its most marked features; loyalty to home, to his profession, and to his country. No man ever loved his home or his country more, and no man more highly esteemed his profession than he. His was a stern conscience, and his sense of right and wrong was profoundly marked. His life was positive. These strong characteristics made him splendidly firm and upright. Blended with this strength there was a beauty of character, a never failing courtesy, a profound modesty, and unbounded sympathy. He was always courteous, always a gentleman. His work was for others, and no more fitting epitaph could be placed upon the granite that will mark his last resting place than the words of the Great Physician, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

During the services the choir sang "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "Lead, Kindly Light," and "Rock of Ages," favorite hymns of the deceased.

The casket was covered with floral tributes from friends and the various organizations of which the deceased was a member.

The bearers were Dr. H. R. Storer, Dr. W. Argyle Watson, Dr. V. Mott Francis, Mr. George Gordon King, Mr. James C. Swan and General Asa Bird Gardiner.

The representatives of the Rhode Island Society of Cincinnati carried with them the flag of the order, among them being Dr. Nathanael Greene, president of the society. The physicians of the city were present almost without exception, the number including Drs. Barker, Arnold, Sanborn, Stanton, Squire, Knapp, Beroyd, Davis, Darrah, Curley, Kenefick, MacKaye, Bradley, Sherman, Brackett, Gillett and Robinson. The city was represented by Mayor Boyle, Aldermen Stevens, Tanner and Hammett; Councilmen Marsh, Hazard, Moffitt, Barker and Albro; City Clerk Stevens, Chief Engineer Kirwin, Chief of Police Read and Captain Garnett; the Newport Historical Society by Messrs. John Congdon, H. B. Wood, J. M. K. Southwick, R. H. Tilley and J. G. Topham; the Rhode Island Sons of the Revolution by Messrs. W. Watts Sherman, E. W. Higbee, D. T. Pinniger, W. G. Ward, Jr., and W. L. Tilley; the Hospital trustees by ex-Mayor Powel, ex-Mayor Burdick, Major T. K. Gibbs, and Messrs. C. E. Hammett, T. G. Brown and L. B. McCagg.

Among others in the audience were L. D. Davis, R. S. Barker, ex-Mayors Slocum, Franklin and Horton; Rev. G. J. Magill, D. D., Senator William G. Roelker of Warwick, Rev. Warran Randolph, D. D., Joseph Northam, Rev. Richard Arnold Greene, Francis B. Peckham, Thomas Dunn, Edmund Tweedy, John H. Cozzens, A. O'D. Taylor, Lewis L. Simmons, Richard Bliss, Albert Hammett Ezra J. Barker, Rev. E. L. Buckey, Erastus P. Allan, Benjamin Almy, John Vars, B. F. Downing, Jr., Frederick Tompkins, T. T. Pitman, William B. Sherman, Job A. Peckham, Rev. Malden Van Horne, Peter King, Henry A. Heath, C. A. Hammett, W. C. Congdon, Henry Lawrence, E. H. Harrington, George A. Hazard, Joshua Sayer, John E. Seabury, James H. Hammett, James H. Taylor, John B. Landers, R. L. Oman, Sinton Hazard, Perry C. Smith, D. B. Fitts, William Hamilton, Dudley Newton and Colonel Howard Smith.

PRINTING A PAPER UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

For the past fortnight the Daily News has been issued under difficulties. Two weeks ago the double cylinder Hoe press was taken out to make room for the new perfecting press, and a smaller and slower machine has since printed the paper. Inconveniences have necessarily resulted, and the public has had its share, among which has been a folding of the paper which was unfamiliar, and an uncut sheet which has not been liked. It is hoped that the condition of things will last but a day or two more, when the new press will be started and all will be happy.

THE MISSION TO TURKEY.

The Turkish government has relieved itself of what would have been a bad blunder in reconsidering its refusal to accept Dr. Angell as minister to that country. It is fortunate for this country as well, and for the interests of civilization. Dr. Angell is an admirable man to deal with complications that always threaten to arise while Turkish affairs are in their present state. An American is needed there who is a Christian gentleman, and who has a soul above partisan politics, and it would be difficult to find one who better realizes these requirements than does Dr. Angell. President McKinley merits praise for appointing him, and, indeed, his foreign apointments to the more important positions generally are among the best we have had from any President.
